DECLARATION OF LLOYD B. POTTER, PH.D.

1. My name is Lloyd B. Potter, and I am over the age of 18 and fully competent in all respects to make this declaration. I have personal knowledge and expertise of the matters herein stated.

2. I was appointed State Demographer of Texas in June of 2010. I hold degrees of Ph.D. in sociology from The University of Texas at Austin, Master of Public Health in epidemiology from Emory University, Master of Science in education from the University of Houston at Clear Lake and Bachelor of Science in sociology from Texas A&M University. I have worked as an Assistant Professor at Fordham University, a post-doctoral fellow at Emory University and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, a Behavior Scientist at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and as a Research Scientist at the non-profit company Education Development Center, Inc. I am currently a professor in the Department of Demography at The University of Texas at San Antonio where I also serve as the director of the Institute for Demographic and Socioeconomic Research (IDSER). I have extensive experience working as an applied demographer and my current work focuses on public policy related research and training applied demographers.

3. Based on my education, qualifications, experience and knowledge of the relevant literature, I believe the following statements are true and accurate.
4. Economic factors are strongly associated with many migrant flows. For example, differences in economic growth, wages, and the employment situation between the United States and Mexico are critical determinants of immigration, and migration of labor out of Mexico (Aguila, 2012). Most undocumented migrants coming to the U.S. are doing so to work. Massey et.al. found that that undocumented migration from Mexico appears to reflect U.S. labor demand and access to migrant networks (Massey, Durand, & Pren, 2014).
5. Most migration (inter-county) within the United States is employment related. Analysis of data from the Current Population Survey indicates that about 43% of moves across county lines between 2012 and 2013 were employment related and 30% were family related (Ihrke, 2014).
6. Kennan and Walker found that interstate migration decisions are influenced to a substantial extent by income prospects. Their research suggests that the link between income and migration decisions is driven both by geographic differences in mean wages and by a tendency to move in search of a better locational match when the income realization in the current location is unfavorable (Kennan & Walker, 2011).

7. In part, the Immigration Reform and Control Act (IRCA) is intended to restrict unauthorized immigration into to the United States by making it illegal for employers to hire unauthorized immigrants and imposing sanctions on employers who employ unauthorized immigrants (Wishnie, 2007). Several states have adopted laws to require E-Verify to make hiring of undocumented immigrants more difficult. Orrenius and Zadvodny found that possible undocumented immigrants in states that had implemented such efforts may have more difficulty working and more difficulty changing jobs (Orrenius & Zavodny, 2016). They also found some evidence suggesting “...that most of the drop in the number of already-present unauthorized immigrants in states that adopt universal E-Verify laws is due to them leaving the USA entirely (Orrenius & Zavodny, 2016).”
8. While DACA participants have motivation to stay in the U.S. and to comply with DACA rules, it is reasonable to conclude that some DACA participants would return to their country of origin if they lose or are not given permission to work in the U.S. The causes of return migration are difficult to address because there is limited research and understanding of return migration. Among DACA participants there is variation in a number of characteristics such as age at immigration, tenure in the U.S., educational attainment, language fluency, and others. Some of these characteristics and combinations would make it more or less likely for some DACA participants to emigrate if they were denied permission to work in the U.S.

9. In a study of young immigrants to the U.S., Regan and Olsen found they were less likely than older immigrants to return to their country of origin (Regan & Olsen, 2000). Child and young immigrants who migrated later in their childhood (having spent more time in their country of origin) were more likely to return to their country of origin than those who immigrated when they were younger. They also found that immigrants with college degrees were more likely to return to their country of origin than those without.
10. In a study of characteristics associated with emigration of foreign born persons in the U.S. (return migration), Van Hook and Zhang found that “indicators of economic integration (home ownership, school enrollment, poverty) and social ties in the U.S. (citizenship, having young children, longer duration in the United States) deter emigration (Van Hook & Zhang, 2011).” They found that indicators favoring return migration to country of origin included having connections with the sending society, such having a spouse or close family there.
11. With loss of permission to work in the U.S., some DACA participants could be expected to migrate out of the U.S. back to their country of origin or to another country where they would be able to work. DACA participants who would be more likely to return to their country of origin, under conditions where they could not work legally in the U.S., could be expected be similar to undocumented migrants who return to country of origin. That is, those DACA participants who migrated to the U.S. when they were older, who have strong family relationships in their country of origin, those who had met savings goals, and those who had achieved higher levels of education would be more likely to emigrate under conditions of not being able to work in the U.S. The variation in characteristics within the DACA applicant population suggests that some do have characteristics that have been associated with higher probability of emigration from the U.S. among undocumented immigrants (i.e., migrating as older teenagers and obtaining higher levels of educational attainment).
